

First day was filled with travelling from Prague to Reykjavík.

On the second day I went for a hike with my family, where Skooky got lost (their dog) and we had to look for him, then we went to Kafí ku (coffee shop with cowshed underneath it), then we went to a really nice hot springs in Husavík. And I also gave some gifts to Isabella from Czech republic.

Then on the third day I went to Lundarskóli, from there we went to the University of Akureyri where there were some „ice breaking“ activities which sounded very interesting at first but they turned out to be quite boring (we were playing some games for kids on iPads) and I was a little disappointed because I expected to discover some new facts about glaciers. Then we returned to Lundarskóli for lunch, then we had lecture about brownfields with Barbara Lampič, after the lecture I stayed at Lundarskóli where I baked some chocolate cake. When I came back home I had dinner and right after that I went to Isabella's friend place where the other girls were and we played some games.

On the fourth day I went to the town hall where they told us about what it takes to reform a brownfield site into a nice area where people can live. After that we returned to Lundarskóli, during that we explored a little bit of Akureyri, when we got there we had a digital workshop and eTwinning workshop.

On the fifth day we got to explore a lot of Icelandic nature and landscapes – we've visited Godafoss, Dimuborgir (lava fields), Námaskard, Hverfjall. After all of this we got to relax in The Blue lagoon of the north). When I returned home I got to meet Isabella's grandma (Isabella's mom had her birthday).

On the sixth day we were working with eTwinning ambassador, after that I went for a walk with Anna and Štěpán (it was raining a lot), then I went home and after that went to the Christmas house with Isabella. And I also got to see the Icelandic horses

On the seventh day we were presenting our project (it was about a location called „Na Moráni“), after that I went home and packed my stuff and got ready for the students ball.

On the eighth day I had to wake up very early because of the journey from Akureyri to Reykjavík, when we got to Reykjavík we went to the museum of whales and after that we explored the city
